COLONIAL BALL OF MONDAY NIGHT CLUB

Many Have Left Town to Participate in Festivities Elsewhere, and Others Have Come in to Take Part in Social Events at Home.

That society should experience a kind of of the guests according to the prescribed spasmodic activity in the week immediately mode. Nearly all the women were the picpreceding Lent was to have been expected, but a careful and, it is presumed, prayerful Sunday morning perusal of the columns which follow, will show that the revival although temporary and possibly factitious in its character, was undoubtedly brisk while it lasted. Besides the much anticipated Colonial ball of the Monday Night club, the large kensingtons of Mrs. Claffin and Miss Himebaugh, the big dancing party of the Montezumas, and the reception given by Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Cullingham, there were plenty of other entertainments of varying size but of invariable success, given in many cases by modest people who shrink from the publicity which they imagine to attach to the exploiting of the names of their guests in the newspapers. These numerous functions, together with the present day.

The list of those present includes: Misses Woolworth, Tuttle of St. Louis, Cady, Himebaugh, Colpetzer, Bartlett, Hoagland, Helen Millard, Lindsey, Webster, Alexander, Anna Millard, Kountze, Taylor, Palmer, Sargent, and Millard, Kountze, Taylor, Palmer, Millard, Kountze, Taylor, Palmer, Millard, Kountze, Taylor, Palmer, Millard, Kountze, Taylor, Palmer, Millard, Millard, Kountze, Millard, Millard, Kountze, Millard, Millar numerous functions, together with the pres-ence in town of several popular young land; Messrs, and Messames Ward Burgess, women, for whom a round of luncheons, dinners and tens have helped to make life worth living, and the departure of many prominent people for the opera in Chicago, the inauguration ceremonies in Washington, and the pageantry and frivolity of Shrove Tuesday in New Orleans, have combined to make a busy week, the salient features of which are faithfully set forth hereinafter.

The reluctance, among the male partici-pants in the Coloniai ball, to don completely the picturesque garb of a century ago, was by no means confined to those who have no ancestors to boast of, but was also noticed in men whose revolutionary sires would have scorned to go about with wide trousers flapping about their well turned calves. It is not easy to account satisfactorily for this disinclination to appear in a dress admirably calculated to set off the superb natural advantages which most young men nowadays are known to possess, but which are in a measure concealed by the golf stockings largely affected at present. Powdered hair alone does not make a colonial gentleman of one, any more than stone walls a prison make or iron bars a cage; and even if one goes the length of putting a scrap of black court-plaster on a portion of one's face which does not require its healing influence, the ensemble still suggests only remotely one's colonial forbears. Possibly if an eighteenth century ball is undertaken again in Omaha, the men will be persuaded to overcome their modesty and natural timidity, and immerse themselves from head to beel in the spirit of the time which is sought to be represented.

The reference to trousers recalls the case of a pair of these necessary, but unmentionable garments, which were irretrievably ruined the other day in the performance of an act of heroism for which the doer of i claimed no credit in view of the undoubted fact that others who passed by on the other side of the street might have done what he did and so saved him a tailor's bill. The manner of the event was this:
On one of the main thoroughfares of

Omaha a brick store building stands next to a vacant lot, the original lowness of which has been accentuated by the erection of the store and the filling in of the street and adjacent lots. These improvements have made of this lot a kind of funnel-like pit, three sides of which in stormy seasons are as difficult to scale as the fourth, which is formed by the brick wall. The affectionately clinging mud which moisture makes of Nebraska soil lies thick and slab everywhere

Everybody was going home to dinner and the sun was dropping low in the west. A little girl of perhaps 8 years, meanly clad painted and written with quotations. and carrying a heavy basket, had started from the rear to cross this treacherous depression toward the sidewalk having doubt less been bidden by her mother to make haste with the supplies for the evening meal. She had come to the bottom without serious mishap, and was struggling painfully to tug her heavy burden up the dangerous declivity that led to safety. Her face was pitiful to see in its growing despair as man after man went by without heeding the mute appeal of her eyes. At last her little strength gave out, and with a choking sob she set her basket down and waited for the final catastrophe.

Just then a young man, who is well known and much admired in the upper circles of society, came up, saw the woeful little figure, grasped the situation with his usual celerity and acted with his customary promptness. He completely spoiled a good share of what he had on, but he rescued the child and her basket and sent her on her way rejoicing, but too much shaken by the event to thank her preserver. As for him, he ate his dinner with a better appetite than usual. The clothes did not trouble him at all. He has money to buy more.

In answer to a typewritten inquiry, signed "A Reader of The Daily Bee," as to "whether it is still the fad for ladies to wear flowers at a select dancing party," the society editor desires to express a strong unwillingness to be made arbiter of any con which by his decision may result in the shirking of the reasonable obligations of any Darby to his Joan. It is his humble but firmly established opinion, however, that flowers are never more beautiful than they adorn a beautiful woman; and, furthermore, that women, beautiful or not take on an added charm from such decoration. As to the usage which obtains at select dancing parties, it may be that women are at present more inclined to carry flowers

The second dancing party of the second series given by the Monday Night club took place last Monday night at the Millard. In ommemoration of the auspicious anniveron the aspect of a colonial ball, and although the minuet which had been projected was omitted by reason of a lack of the needed opportunities for rehearsals, an admirably arranged dancing program was much en-joyed by the participants, and the party was one of the pleasantest yet given by the club. Powdered hair was de riguer, and hair-ircesers were at hand to prepare the heads turesque garb of a century ago; and the men so attired made a brave show in appearance. although by comparison a trifle weak in numbers. About forty couples danced, including nearly the full membership of the club with a few invited guests. Arrangements for music, refreehments and the other oncomitants of a successful soirce were not materially different from those employed on former occasions. A feature of this party, introduced in deference to the patriotic anniversary, was the presentation to each guest of a pretty slik flag, pocket handkerchief size, the forty-five stars in the field of which served to connect the time of the beginning of the republic with the conditions of the present day.

MUSIC.

Next Thursday evening the Omaha Musical society will give its fourth concert for the present season at the Creighton theater. It will appear in conjunction with the Camilla Urso Concert company, an organization now on its way to the Pacific

Mme. Camilla Urso is one of the first artists of the world, and as a violin virtuoso no other woman and few men can be com pared with her. She has played in all the great cities of Europe and America. Born in France, the daughter of a flute player in the opera house orchestra of her native town, she was from the very first under the nfluence of the art to which she has devoted her life. When she, a child, asked for violin, it was denied her on the ground that it was not a suitable instrument for a voman to play, but she persisted in her de mands and finally succeeded in gaining her point. That persistence to attain all that is worthy has been the mainspring of her character and has made her one of the greatest artists in the whole musical world

Mme. Urso is said to have a thoroughly competent company to assist her. Minnie Methot, the soprano, is said to be one of the finest singers on the American concert stage. She has scored successes in Paris and New York. Edwin Douglass, the tenor, comes well spoken of and possesses fine, robust voice. George D. Wesley, the planist, is a good soloist and accompaniist. The Musical society has been rehearsing regularly every week since the Nordica con-cert and may be expected to do as good work on March 4 as it did on February 1. Two of its numbers are very light and were se-lected in order to give this program an es-eases at your Druggists or Malled Free. pecially popular character. An important feature of the program will be the harp solo played by Miss Wilhelmina Lowe. Omaha's harpist is probably the best this side of Chicago.

It is safe to predict a fine concert for Thursday evening, and if the music-loving people of this city show their appreciation by their presence the Omaha Musical society will continue to bring to their doors the reatest available foreign talent and to give erformances in the future as in the past. ...

Concerning the vocal resources of Omaha it is worth while to notice that the resident population of this city will be increased perhaps 25 per cent—possibly more—by the holding of the Transmississippi Exposition and that out of these newcomers many singers may be selected, able and willing to help increase the resident choral nucleus which may be organized here and which would take part in all exposition concerts. Two hundred or 250 singers should be found in Omaha during the time of the exposition, in constant rehearsal, and prepared to sing any music suitable for the time and place.
